Course Description

In the rapidly evolving field of bronchoscopy and lung nodule evaluation, this one-day post graduate course at the CHEST annual meeting is designed to equip practicing pulmonologists with essential skills for advanced diagnostic procedures. It covers various techniques such as robotic bronchoscopy, electromagnetic navigational bronchoscopy, radial probe endobronchial ultrasound (EBUS), and linear probe EBUS. The course emphasizes hands-on procedural training and a FLIPPED classroom approach, focusing on evaluating pulmonary nodules, lung cancer screening, diagnosis and staging. This course aims to bridge the gap in technological advancements for bronchoscopic biopsies of peripheral lung lesions.

Course Objectives

- By the end of this educational program, participants will be able to describe the key limitations of conventional and guided bronchoscopy platforms for diagnosing peripheral lung nodules and understand the rationale behind the introduction of robot-assisted bronchoscopy and advanced navigation systems.

- Participants will acquire the practical skills necessary to operate robot-assisted bronchoscopy and utilize advanced navigation systems effectively for the diagnosis of peripheral lung nodules.
- Participants will gain a comprehensive understanding of best practices and guidelines for diagnosing and managing pulmonary nodules, integrating the latest advancements in bronchoscopy technology to optimize patient care.
- By the end of the program, participants will recognize the importance of continuous learning and professional development to stay up-to-date with evolving bronchoscopy techniques and their applications in clinical practice ultimately improving patient outcomes and safety.
